BUGS IS SMART

Porky Pig's eyes were glowing with excitement as he rushed up to Bugs Bunny and Petunia Pig.

"L-Look what I've g-got!" he cried, holding out a heavy book. "This b-book tells all about th-the old p-pirates and their b-buried t-treasure!"

"So what?" Bugs scoffed. "We ain't piruts an' we ain't got any treasure!"

"B-But we m-might f-find some," Porky insisted, opening the book. "It s-says here that l-lots of t-treasure is b-buried in the earth j-just w-waiting for s-someone s-smart enough to find it."

"Let's start looking for some!" Petunia cried, her eyes dancing. "Then we'll all be rich!"

"B-But h-how?" Porky wanted to know. "W-We g-gotta be awful s-smart to f-figure out a w-way to f-find where it's b-buried!"

Bugs suddenly yipped and snapped his fingers. "I got it!" he yelled. "Moggots!"

"M-Moggots?" Porky repeated, puzzled.

"Yeah," Bugs explained. "Those things that pick up pieces of metal!"

"Oh," Porky sighed. "You mean magnets!!"

"Sure. Magnets! That's what I said," Bugs grinned. "We could tie a bunch of magnets together and start walkin' around. If there's any money buried anywhere, it will pull th' magnets and they'll show where it is!"

"G-Gee!" Porky exclaimed, looking admiringly at Bugs. "That s-sounds f-fine! You're s-sure s-smart, Bugs!"

Two hours later they had bought all the magnets they could find. They tied them together in a bunch on the end of a long slender pole. Then they tried out their big magnet on some metal, which they buried under a few inches of dirt in Porky's back yard.

The end of the pole dipped sharply downward when the magnets were held over the spot of ground where the metal was buried.

"H-Hooray! It w-works!" Porky cried happily. "N-Now where'll w-we s-start to h-hunt for the b-buried t-treasure?"

"Let's try that cave down by the seashore," Bugs decided after a moment's thought. "It's a big one and there's a lotta sand on the bottom. It'll be easy diggin'! An' piruts'd prob'ly bury their treasure near th' beach."

Eagerly they started for the cave, carrying their magnets and shovels. For a moment they stood uncertainly at the entrance to the huge dark cave. Then they started boldly inside, holding the long pole in front of them.

"Isn't this exciting?" Petunia whispered to Porky.

Before Porky could answer, there was a quick tug on the pole and the bunched magnets dropped downward toward the sandy floor of the cave.

"Jeepers!" Bugs yelled. "We've found it! Start diggin' quick, you two! I'll hold the magnets over the right spot!"

Obediently the eager Porky and Petunia began to dig down into the soft sand. After a moment Porky's shovel struck something that clanged like metal.

"W-We've s-struck the t-treasure!" he stuttered in excitement.

Then Bugs dropped the pole and helped with the digging. The sand flew. A few minutes later the three gazed down in puzzled bewilderment at a large round metal container.

"Jumpin' Jiminy!" Bugs breathed. "It's a garbage can—a plain, ordinary, everyday garbage can!"

The three groaned with disappointment.

"Pirates didn't have garbage cans," Petunia whispered.

"L-Let's t-take off the l-lid and s-see what's inside," Porky stuttered.

They pulled and tugged and, at last, the cover came off the big garbage can. The eyes of Porky, Bugs, and Petunia opened wide in breathless surprise when they saw what the can contained.

Furs! Soft, silky, beautiful furs!

"What'll we do with them?" Petunia murmured.

"T-Take 'em t-to the p-police," Porky replied.

So, while Porky and Petunia finished digging the fur-filled garbage can out of the sand, Bugs ran home and returned with Porky's wagon. The three rolled and lifted the heavy can into the wagon and started for the village.

When they set the can down in front of the police chief and lifted the lid, he whistled long and loudly.

"Where'd you get this?" the chief demanded.

Porky, Bugs, and Petunia all talked together, as they told him about their hunt for buried treasure.

"Well, you sure found treasure all right," the chief smiled. "These furs were stolen from a big store in the city. They're worth a small fortune. The thieves evidently hid 'em in that cave till it was safe to move 'em. You three'll get a nice reward for this day's work."

Later, Porky, Bugs, and Petunia walked happily down the street, each carrying a crackling new bill.

"W-Well, w-we f-found our t-treasure, after all," Porky grinned, looking at the money in his hand. "And B-Bugs's m-magnets d-did it!"

"Yeah," Bugs puffed out his chest. "You have to be smart to figure out things like that!"
